

MAKING THE DIFFERENCE IN PEACEBUILDING, SECURITY AND DEVELOPMENT - RBM AND BEYOND

3 - 6 JULY 2018 | GENEVA, SWITZERLAND

8TH INTERNATIONAL WORKSHOP

Policy-makers and practitioners in the fields of peacebuilding, security and development still lack critical skills in results-based management (RBM) and monitoring, evaluation, and learning (MEL). This course, now in its 8th year, provides skills development in these disciplines, with results-based approaches and theories of change, as well as the implementation of monitoring and evaluation. The course is aimed at practitioners wanting to extend or upgrade their expertise. For 2018, an online preparatory course has been added as a requirement to make better use of the time in Geneva, and there is more emphasis on complex environments, with Outcome Mapping, Outcome Harvesting and the Cynefin framework now included. The learning focusses on practical work in small groups, based on case studies.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

As a participant, you will enhance your ability to:

- design a project or programme using RBM and theories of change
- plan and implement monitoring, evaluation, accountability and learning frameworks and activities
- plan and implement an evaluation based on an evaluation matrix
- manage a project or an annual review based on results and impact
- resolve problems of demonstrating results, especially for gender related issues
- understand and work in complex environments

COLLABORATIVE ENVIRONMENT

The course consists of instruction in essential tools and techniques, current lessons from the field (case studies), guidance from experts, and hands-on practice developing skills for peace, security and development programmes. About 40% of the course time is spent in a small group setting working on relevant problems

Course modules include:

- RBM, results and impacts
- gender analysis
- theories of change
- evaluation questions and design
- indicators and data gathering
- theories of change for the complex domain
