In 2007, as the first and only organization to ever do so, the Small Arms Survey estimated the number of firearms in circulation in the world at 875 million. For the first time in over ten years, these figures have been updated—covering civilian, law enforcement, and military holdings.

The Permanent Mission of Australia to the United Nations and the Small Arms Survey invite you to a side event to discuss the updated figures.